

The Nova Scotia Liquor Corporation is a socially responsible and financially profitable retail organization. More than half a million customers are served every year by the corporation's 1,500 employees, generating revenue in excess of five hundred million dollars. With more than 100 stores across the province, the NSLC has been on a journey of transformation. The NSLC shopping experience has come a long way, as has its commitment to Health and Safety.

Ensuring a Healthy Workplace, built on a strong foundation of safety, is a corporate performance strategy for the NSLC. The corporation's leadership in this area has been recognized nationally and the NSLC was among the first organizations in Canada to be fully compliant with the new national standard for OH&S Management (CSA Z1000).

We are currently searching for a seasoned health and safety professional who can build on this success in the role of Manager, Workplace Health and Safety, based at our Halifax, Nova Scotia head office.

Manager, Workplace Health and Safety

Reporting to the Vice President of Human Resources, the Manager - Workplace Health & Safety is a key member of the HR management team providing leadership to enhance the development of a healthy workplace culture. The incumbent will develop, implement, and maintain Health and Safety systems, policies, and programs, while guiding a team providing advice, technical expertise and support to employees and management.

The successful candidate will hold a post-secondary education in a relevant field along with a minimum of five years experience in OH&S of increasing responsibility. Previous experience in developing Healthy Workplace programs as well as significant experience supporting line management with OH&S issues and in supporting joint occupational health and safety committees is required.

To explore this opportunity further, please contact Bruce Snow or Nadia MacAulay at 902-422-4886 or submit your resume online at <http://www.jobs.kbrs.ca/Careers/977/>.